Esbjerg, Denmark

How to get to Esbjerg, Denmark

Esbjerg is a city and port on the west coast of the Jutland Peninsula, in Denmark. The city is the fifth largest in Denmark, with a population of over 100,000.

Air

Esbjerg has an airport with direct flights available from Aberdeen to Esbjerg with BMI regional. However, these flights can get quite expensive. The better option may be to fly to Copenhagen or Billund Airport and then take a train from to Esbjerg.

You can also travel via train or bus to Esbjerg, as across Europe the train lines and coach services are usually very good and reliable.

How to get to Stavanger, Norway

Air

Stavanger international airport, Sola, with its more than 60 destinations makes it easy to go by plane to and from the region.

Train

Regional trains from Oslo and Kristiansand to Stavanger are an economical and comfortable way of travelling, where you at the same time enjoy fantastic natural landscapes such as forests, mountains and the open landscapes of Jæren. NSB takes you all the way into the centre of Stavanger.

Car and ferry

E39 takes you efficiently to the region. If you arrive by car from other countries in Europe, you can go by car ferry from Denmark to Kristiansand, or by car ferry from Denmark to Risavika, near Stavanger. Colorline and Fjordline operate these ferry connections.

Bus and coach

Bus routes such as Haukeliekspressen (Oslo-Haukeli-Haugesund), Sør-Vest ekspressen (Kristiansand-Eigersund-Stavanger) and Kystbussen (Bergen – Haugesund – Stavanger) take you from the region from the north, south and east. Locally there are buses in the entire region organised by Kolumbus, Suldal Billag and Boreal Transport.

If you have any further questions regarding joining or leaving the vessel please do not hesitate to contact me on 01133919809 or at info@maybe-sailing.com.

Kind regards
